Thailand is a country with a diverse scenery. There is somewhere to visit at whatever time of the year.

In central Thailand and the eastern provinces, the hot summer weather starts around mid February and goes on to April. In April, the extreme temperatures can go up to the 40 degrees centigrade. The winter months are from mid November to mid February. There may only be a few days of sincerely cold weather during these months. The rainy season kicks in from May to October. The rain is frequent and sometimes fierce. Usually rainstorms go on for around 30minutes or so. If you're visiting the beach destinations in the east (Pattaya, Rayong, Koh Chang), the best time is from December to May.

Northem Thailand and the Northeast have the same basic seasons although the winters are significantly cooler. Mountainous regions can get particularly cold, on some occasions down to 0degrees centigrade. In these parts, winter starts in November and goes on to February. Without doubt the rest months when the best-flowers are in bloom, it is dry and cool, and in the mountains fogs often form, making it quite a wonderful scenery. April is also a great month-during the Songkran Festival people will most likely throw water at you.

Southern Thailand has only two seasons-summer and the rainy season. The Gulf of Thailand lies to the east of the Thai peninsula(半岛) while the Andaman Sea lies to the west. Visiting areas west of the peninsula （Phuket, Phang Nga, Krabi）is best done between mid November and April to avoid the monsoons(季风) that occur during other months-monsoons obviously make visiting islands by boat difficult and sometimes dangerous. Areas east of the peninsula(Koh Samui, Hat Yai) are best visited from December to June.
