第一节 应用文写作

Dear Editor,

I'm writing to share my thoughts about the TV programs played during lunchtime in the canteen.

In my view, music programs is the better option. First, music relieves mental pressure effectively. After a morning of intense classes, our brains are tired from heavy thinking. Soft melodies help us relax and calm down, while upbeat music lifts our spirits, making the lunch break a perfect time for mental relaxation. Second, music improves the dining experience. It creates a warm, comfortable atmosphere that helps us enjoy our meals and chat with classmates peacefully. Unlike news or noisy programs, music stays in the background and never disturbs our eating. A varied playlist can cater to students' preferences, preparing us well for the afternoon classes.

Thank you for your time and thoughtful consideration.

Yours,

Li Hua

At that critical moment Anna stepped in. Approaching the quarreling boys with a calm smile, she suggested they flip a coin to settle their dispute. Simple as that, the argument ended. Everyone was stunned. Then, she began distributing treats like a caring big sister, instantly soothing the restless children. Making use of leftover candy boxes, she folded intricate paper animals—elephants, lions, and birds—and presented them to each child on the bus. The children's eyes sparkled with joy as they admired their unique gifts, their cries replaced by laughter. The man who had asked about their dreams earlier watched in astonishment, clapping appreciatively. As for Sumi, a new emotion warmed her chest: pride.

Sumi excitedly called Anna a hero, but she shook her head gently. She grinned and replied softly, "Mom, I'm not a hero. When a hero walks down the road, everyone claps, but I want to be the one clapping for others." That simple answer shifted something deep within Sumi. She realized she had always pushed Anna to achieve, shine, and be number one, yet she had missed the point. Being kind, happy, and true to oneself was the real achievement. Perhaps being "Number 23" wasn't terrible after all; it was exactly where Anna was meant to shine. A tear of joy rolled down Sumi's cheek as she wrapped her arm around her daughter's shoulder. "Then be that teacher, my Anna. I shall be your loudest admirer."

M: I have a rabbit already and I'm trying to ask my dad to get me a dog.

W: I have a cat. She follows me everywhere around the house. Keeping a cat isn't as much work as keeping a dog.

M: Maybe I should change my mind.

Text 2

M: Let's paint this wall yellow and move the bed to the window.

W: OK.

M: Susie said our curtains were too dark. Why not replace them with bright ones?

W: Well, I don't have to factor in all people's suggestions.

Text 3

M: You're glued to the TV all day. How about going to the park with me?

W: It is burning outside. Summer holiday is really boring.

M: How could that be? I used to put up a tent in the field with my sister during summer holidays.

Text 4

W: Did you hear about the charity event at the village hall next weekend?

M: Yeah, I saw the flyers(传单). There's going to be a band and food. Are you going?

W: Absolutely. I'm volunteering there to show people the way. It's for a great cause.

Text 5

W: Have you heard from Sarah today? Can she make it to our group presentation?

M: She called me. She planned to land today, but the storm has held her up. She remains at the airport waiting for further news.

W: That's too bad. We'll have to cover her part.

M: Yeah, we don't have a choice.

Text 6 (第 6 题为主旨题)

W: This is a picture of La Jument, a lighthouse in France.

M: Wow, is this the lighthouse keeper? He is so small compared to the huge waves in the picture.

W: Yeah. This picture was taken in 1989. The photographer was taking photos from a helicopter. The lighthouse keeper heard the noise and thought it was a rescue helicopter. That's why he came out and appeared in the picture.

M: ⑦It was risky to walk out of the door when the waves were breaking on the lighthouse.

W: That's true. It's also said that people can earn 800,000 dollars a year working there.

M: ⑦Even if I need the money, I would never choose to work there.

Text 7

M: Have you seen my glasses? I can't find them anywhere.

W: ⑨Go to the bathroom and look in the mirror.

M: ⑨You mean I've got them on. How could that be?

W: You're the most absent-minded person I've ever met.

M: I can't deny it. I would lose my head if it weren't placed on my shoulders.

W: I'll never forget the time you went fishing and forgot to take your fishing pole.

M: I won't forget it either, but that's not the most memorable example of my forgetfulness.

W: How about the time you started to leave without having any pants on?

M: No, that's not it.

W: I'm tired of guessing, tell me.

M: You never would have guessed. Well, anyway, ⑧⑩the day we were supposed to get married was such a beautiful day that I forgot all about the wedding and went fishing instead.

Text 8

M: It's such a pleasure to meet everyone. ⑩Thanks to people like you, small businesses everywhere have many growth opportunities.

W: Thank you, Paul. ⑩And thanks for coming to my office to conduct a roadshow. Now you can begin.

M: OK. So, we all feel anxious to look our best. But clothing styles quickly change, and fashion isn't cheap! Plus, the more we buy, the more we waste. How many of us have over five clothing items that we never wear?

W: Good, how will you fix this?

M: Through my service, Rental Trend.

W: How does it work?

M: It's a website where users can rent out their clothes. Anyone who is interested in those clothes can offer a price and rent them. There will be many types of clothes. Whether it's for a party, photo taking or vacation, we try our best to meet people's need.

W: Interesting, Paul. Have you borrowed from any banks?

M: No. ⑪⑫And because my company is only a year old, this is the first time I've come to sincerely invite you to put money into our website. ⑬I'm sure you will see what a big difference you make. With your help, we can bring fair fashion nationwide.

Text 9

W: We're so happy you're here again. Last time we talked about your video series. ⑭Now, you've come to tell us about your new book—let's hear it for Boris!

M: Thanks, everyone. A lot has changed over the years. I filmed a new movie and started coaching worldwide.

W: We're very interested. You've become the country's most successful life coach. What does this mean to you?

M: Life coaching shows people how to become the smartest, happiest, and most successful versions of themselves.

W: I love that. It took me years of education to become a talk show host. ⑮How did you gain success?

M: ⑮Simply put, I have done many different jobs. Within several years, I learned about myself and discovered what I wanted to do!

W: What about difficulties?

M: I was lucky to find stable jobs that paid well. But I still failed many times. ⑯My hardest task was learning never to give up.

W: That must be in your book.

M: Of course. ⑰The key to success is not avoiding failure, but never giving up hope no matter how many times you fail! Read the book to learn more!

W: ⑰We have copies of your book here. Can we give them to the audience? Then, we'll discuss your future plans.

M: ⑰Great!

Text 10 (第 20 题为总结题)

Chinese historical dramas have become increasingly popular in recent years. Fans around the world love them for their beauty and rich storytelling. However, many argue that these "C-dramas" contain so many incorrect details. Instead, they sell people a dream of a China that never was.

C-dramas are not educational documentaries. Screenwriters often add dramatic elements, invent characters, and change certain events to make the story more exciting or meaningful for audiences. However, I'd argue that C-dramas have something valuable to offer in terms of history education. By drawing us into the lives of people from history, they create an emotional connection to the past that no textbook could ever match.

Further research is necessary to get a proper historical and cultural education. But C-dramas have become a starting point that leads people down this worthy path. Inspired by their favorite TV shows, more young people are now exploring traditional Chinese history and culture than ever before, and that's a real cause for celebration.
