My ideal AI learning partner looks like a small robot that can sit quietly on my desk. It has a soft white face, big friendly eyes, and a tiny screen on its chest. When I feel stressed, it changes its voice to a calmer tone and shows a simple “one-step plan” to help me start.

Functionally, it can explain my mistakes with clear examples, create short quizzes from my wrong answers, and remind me to review at the right time. It also helps me polish my writing by offering better word choices and more natural sentences. With it, I learn faster and feel less pressure.

参考范文二（109 词）

My ideal AI learning partner is like a smartwatch with a small earbud. It looks modern and simple, and the screen can show key words, charts, and study tips. The best part is that it can “see” my learning habits and adjust its help.

It can listen to my reading and correct my pronunciation immediately. It can also summarize long texts into a clear outline and ask me questions to check understanding. When I prepare for exams, it designs a weekly plan based on my scores and gives me feedback after each practice. It doesn't just give answers—it guides me to think and improve step by step.

With these ideas in mind, I opened the book to the damaged page. My hands trembled slightly as I took out the gold pen. Meticulously, I traced the tear, transforming it into a delicate, shimmering line that seemed to radiate a faint magical glow, as if a spell had just been cast. Then, with utmost care, I peeled off the winged broomstick sticker. I thoughtfully positioned it right beside Harry's torn broom, making it appear as though a companion broom was soaring alongside him, part of a grander adventure. The page, though once damaged, now held a unique, artistic touch, a testament to my anxious hope. 微信公众号IAI English

The next morning, I walked up to Lily with the book in my hands. My stomach churned with a mix of apprehension and a strange sense of courage. "Lily," I confessed, my voice barely a whisper, "I made a terrible mistake. I damaged your precious book." I held out the open page. Her eyes widened, first in shock, then slowly, a look of utter amazement replaced it. She leaned closer, her fingers gently touching the golden line and the new sticker. "It's...it's incredible! It's like a secret charm, making it even more special," she breathed, a warm smile gracing her lips. In that moment, our shared love for magic and our friendship felt stronger than any tear.
