When Local Opera Meets the Young

Recently, our school held an engaging activity, “Local Opera Entering Campus”, focusing on Shandong Bangzi, a classic local opera from our city. 微信公众号IAI English

It was truly enlightening. Celebrated folk artists gave wonderful performances, explained its special costumes and unique vocal styles, and shared warm stories behind it. Then, amazingly, one artist creatively guided us in interactive workshops, helping mix traditional tunes with modern pop elements. The revitalized version brought the local opera to a thrilling peak—we not only learned practical skills but also tried modernized singing, thus literally feeling the charm of Shandong Bangzi.

What a delightful eye-opener! It has offered us a precious chance to engage with our intangible cultural heritage. Hopefully, more traditional arts of this kind will find their way into campus life and truly resonate with us teenagers.

“Let me show you how,” I offered, moving to the center. The young gymnasts gathered around me, their eyes carrying the very hunger I had once known. I took a deep breath, feeling the familiar texture of the mat beneath my feet. Then I began—placed my palms firmly on the ground, lifted my legs high, spun sideways and landed lightly—a perfect cartwheel, just as Mum had taught me. The students gasped, then burst into applause. I glanced toward Mum, who was watching me with pride—the same pride that had once lit up her eyes when I, at six years old, landed that move for the first time. 微信公众号IAI English

After class, I took Mum to the nearby clinic. Test results showed her ankle needed at least a month of rest. Mum sighed softly, her eyes clouding with a sadness she quickly masked with a weak smile. Leaning close to her, I could sense the tiredness in her shoulders—and the quiet pain in her leg, which had once carried her to glory. “When did you grow up so much?” she whispered gently. “You taught me: every great gymnast falls, but only the best ones get back up. You’ve “fallen” this time, Mum, but I firmly believe you will rise again.” And in that moment, I realized it was my turn to stand by her side—to be her spotter.

Text 1

W: When I read the news online, I see so many videos and ads that I end up forgetting what I came to read!

M: Actually, you can download a special app that blocks videos and ads for some time.

Text 2

W: The party was full of fun activities, but it was a bit of a shame that they didn’t make a list of who should bring what dish.

M: Yes, it certainly meant that lots of people brought the same thing.

Text 3

M: I was surprised not to see you at the gym on Saturday night, Helen. You weren’t sick, were you?

W: Nothing like that, Paul. In fact, my brother Kevin is moving to his new house soon, and he asked me to help him pack his belongings.

Text 4

M: Have you noticed how everyone is wearing oversized clothes lately?

W: Yes! And I heard long shirts are coming back. The trends just keep repeating.

M: Interesting! I have a few old ones I could wear again.

Text 5

M: How can I help you today?

W: Oh, yes, could you help me choose a laptop? I use it mostly for school work.

M: A mid-range one should suit your needs. Right this way, I’ll show you our best options for that.

Text 6

M: Good afternoon, I’m contacting you regarding our recent vacation package.

W: Good afternoon, Mr. Patel. How may I assist you today?

M: The accommodations provided were below the standards promised in our package. The room was poorly maintained, with cleanliness issues.

W: I apologize for any inconvenience. I’ll pass this matter on to our quality control team for further investigation.

M: Thank you. I hope this feedback helps improve future customer experiences.

Text 7

M: It’s been two years now since I totally quit eating meat.

W: Me too. I just wanted to live a greener life, and meat production’s just not good for the environment. I thought I might miss certain vitamins, so I took the time to learn about healthy eating.

M: Oh, that sounds like a good idea. Not trying to do too much at once was beneficial for me, like exchanging chicken or steak for beans and vegetables bit by bit.

W: I did pretty much the same thing and was amazed how varied non-meat dishes can be, in fact.

W: Hey, Mark, do you have a minute to go over the details of our upcoming business trip?

M: Sure, Anna. When do we leave?

W: We're flying out next Monday at 8 a.m. I've booked us on the direct flight to Chicago. We need to be at the airport by 6 a.m. for check-in and security. I've arranged for a car service to pick us up at 5 a.m.

M: Great. Do we have a detailed schedule for the trip yet?

W: Yes. We'll have meetings with the client on Monday afternoon and all day Tuesday. Wednesday morning is set aside for a factory visit, and we fly back Wednesday evening. So we could only spare a little time on Tuesday night to check out the city.

M: Sounds busy, but manageable.

Text 9

W: Rob, what do you think we should announce first on the show today?

M: I was thinking we should start with the big concert ticket giveaway. It will definitely attract a lot of attention from our listeners.

W: But don't you think we should kick off with the weather update? It's pretty cloudy out there, and people will want to know if it's going to clear up later.

M: You're right. Maybe we can fit in a quick weather update, then go straight into the giveaway announcement.

W: Perfect. That way, we cover what people need to know first, and then we grab their attention with the giveaway. We could even preview the giveaway right after the weather. So listeners stick around.

M: Exactly. Something like "after this weather update, stay tuned for details on how you can win tickets to the biggest concert of the year".

W: And we'll follow that up with the morning headlines.

Text 10

W: Hello, everyone. I'm Jenny, and I'm here to talk to you about being an actress. I've been in the business for a long time. I'm currently working on a film called Three Bridges, which I hope is going to be a hit. However, most of you might recognize me from Blackfield Road, the soap opera. I spent three years at a drama school. There, we studied subjects like acting techniques, voice training, and screenplay analysis. At school, we had this program where senior students had to spend two weeks in a real work environment. I got to spend time in a theater. I learnt all about how they built the set and how the costumes were made. After graduation, I had hoped to be given a part in a film, but instead, it was a small part in a TV commercial! However, after that, I had better opportunities to participate in some films. I'm trying out at the moment for a Shakespeare play. It's King Lear, and I'm really looking forward to working on stage in a theater again. It's a great chance to sharpen my acting skills, but nothing compares to the experience of having a real audience. 微信公众号IAI English
